Topic:

Two objectives, one infrastructure: Applications for railway operations and broadband Internet in an integrated LTE Network for a subway operator.

We will be showcasing a test project of a major European metro operator, demonstrating how a single LTE network can serve multiple applications which until now were running on separate WLAN networks. These applications include a solution for the mission-critical operations of the railway itself via Communication-Based Train Control (CBTC), the operations communication system and video surveillance, as well as passenger services including streaming multimedia content for passengers both inside the trains and at train stops.
